"WHAT'S AT STAKE?"

NBC Newsmen to Examine 1962 Election Stakes in Finale
Of "The Campaign and the Candidates" Series

The stakes in the 1962 elections will be examined by NBC News correspondents Monday, Nov. 5 (10:30-11 p.m. EST) in the final program of "The Campaign and the Candidates" series of eight pre-election programs on the NBC-TV Network.

This program, titled "What's at Stake?," will feature newsmen in the same important assignments they will have Tuesday, Nov. 6 in NBC News' coverage of the elections. Chet Huntley and David Brinkley will be anchormen. Regional reporters will be Sander Vanocur for the East, Frank McGee for the South, Merrill Mueller for the Midwest and John Chancellor for the West. Ray Scherer will describe the NBC News' "Dew-line" reporting system of getting significant and substantial returns in six key states shortly after the polls close. Richard Harkness will explain how RCA computers will be used to determine election trends.

"What's at Stake?" will originate in NBC's Election Central in Studio 8-H, RCA Building, New York City, which will be the headquarters for the Election Night coverage.

The stakes to be covered in this program will include:

The Republican Presidential candidacy in 1964. At least four men considered to be of Presidential timber are seeking the office of governor -- Nelson A. Rockefeller in New York, Richard M. Nixon in California, George B. Romney in Michigan and William W. Scranton in Pennsylvania. How they fare will determine in part their chances to be the Republican standard-bearer in the 1964 Presidential election.

President Kennedy's foreign policy. The voters' approval or disapproval of the President's foreign policy will be reflected in their support of the Democrats backing his actions. The U. S. "image" abroad also will be affected by the Administration's popularity at home.

Control of the Senate and House of Representatives. Thirty-nine Senate seats and the 435 seats in the House are being contested.

"What's at Stake?" will be produced by Reuven Frank, who will also produce the television coverage Election Night.

MRS. JOHN F. KENNEDY, FORMER PRESIDENT EISENHOWER
AND MRS. EISENHOWER, WILL BE SEEN IN NBC NEWS
COLOR SPECIAL ON NATIONAL CULTURAL CENTER

Mrs. John F. Kennedy, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Mrs. Eisenhower will be seen in the NBC News full-hour special on the National Cultural Center in Washington, to be broadcast in color on the NBC-TV Network Sunday, Nov. 11 (4:30 p.m. EST).

The filmed program is titled, "A Stage for Excellence: The National Cultural Center."

Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Eisenhower are honorary co-chairmen of the center, described by Mrs. Kennedy as a "national stage" for professional and non-professional talent of all 50 states and for visiting artists from abroad.

The First Lady was filmed in the White House with NBC News correspondent Sander Vanocur, discussing the value of the proposed new center to Americans and explaining its importance as a living symbol of this country's appreciation of the arts. Mrs. Kennedy introduces different examples of professional and non-professional entertainers who will eventually perform at the Center. As previously announced, they include Mahalia Jackson, Robert Frost, Emlyn Williams and Albert Dekker, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Bolshoi Ballet, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and the University of Minnesota Players.

Former President and Mrs. Eisenhower were filmed outside their Gettysburg, Pa., home as they inspected a seven-foot-long model of the $30,000,000 center with its architect, Edward Durell Stone. The Eisenhowers will be heard commenting on the structure while Stone describes the building.

Plans call for construction of the center to begin next year on a 13-acre site on the East bank of the Potomac near the Lincoln Memorial. The center will include an opera house, a concert hall, a theatre and a roof garden, all in one colonnaded building. The site was donated by Congress which stipulated that construction costs be met by contributions of the American people.

Richard Chamberlain -- virtually unknown by the American public a little over a year ago, and now known to millions for his title role in NBC-TV's "Dr. Kildare" series -- is subject of a picture-and-text profile in the Nov. 20 issue of Look Magazine (on the newsstands Nov. 6). The handsome NBC star, according to Virginia Kelly, who prepared the article for Look, "wears his success like the gentleman he is."

The pictures show Chamberlain at work and at play. Raymond Massey, who is Chamberlain's co-star in the series, is shown as few viewers know him -- as a practical joker. Chamberlain, according to the article, gets more fan mail than any other person ever received at M-G-M, even more than was sent to the late Clark Gable.

"Dr. Kildare," now in its second season on NBC-TV, is broadcast Thursdays (8:30-9:30 p.m., EST).

NBC NEWS PROTESTS TO DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AGAINST RESTRICTIONS ON 'FREE FLOW OF INFORMATION'

William R. McAndrew, Executive Vice President, NBC News, in a telegram to Arthur Sylvester, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs, said NBC News "objects most strenuously" to the Defense Department's restrictions on "the free flow of information to the American public."

Text of the telegram follows:

"NBC News objects most strenuously to limitations imposed by the Department of Defense upon the free flow of information to the American public. It should be abundantly clear that manipulation and control of the news by our government, however admirable the motive, is a dangerous device, not only alien to our democratic tradition but destructive of the very freedoms we are striving to preserve. We urgently request that the restrictions that have been placed on free and independent gathering and reporting of information be completely and promptly removed."

HOPALONG CASSIDY RIDES ACROSS FRESNO (CALIF.) TELEVISION SCREENS
FOR 10TH YEAR WITH SAME SPONSOR: PRODUCERS' DAIRY ASSOCIATION

Hoppy rides across the Fresno, Calif., home screens for the 10th consecutive year with the same sponsor.

The Producers' Dairy Association has just signed with NBC Films to renew the "Hopalong Cassidy" series for another go-around, thus establishing a decade of show-and-sponsor teamwork. The programs will be televised on station KJEO-TV.

Clifford Ogden, NBC Films' chief of sales on the West Coast, negotiated the renewal, a habit he has developed since he originally sold Hoppy to Producers' Dairy Association in 1953 for the Fresno market. Another familiar note in the distributor-sponsor-program-market transaction is station KJEO-TV, which has carried the series for all but two of this 10-year saga in Fresno.

Mr. Ogden said: "Talk about sponsor-identification! Every woman and child in Fresno thinks about Hoppy each time they sip a glass of milk, or thinks about a glass of milk each time they see Hoppy."

"Hopalong Cassidy" stars William Boyd in the title role and is available in 47 full-hour episodes and 52 half-hour episodes. They can be scheduled in various combinations, alternating the 60-minute editions with any two of the shorter segments.

NOTED SPORTSCASTERS TO BE HOLIDAY PARADE COMMENTATORS

Bud Palmer and Chris Schenkel to Serve as Co-Hosts for NBC-TV's
Color Coverage of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade and Circus

Two of the nation's top sports commentators, Bud Palmer and Chris Schenkel, will be parade commentators when they serve as co-hosts for NBC-TV's color coverage of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade and Circus Thursday, Nov. 22 (10 a.m. to 12 noon EST).

A third emcee will be announced soon as host and ringmaster of the circus portion of the two-hour show. TV, film and stage celebrities participating in Macy's 36th annual parade also will be announced shortly.

Palmer and Schenkel will describe New York's traditional holiday spectacle -- which also will feature five mammoth balloons (including Donald Duck and Bullwinkle Moose), colorful marching bands, scenic floats and other participants -- from the official reviewing stand in front of Macy's at Herald Square, where five NBC color cameras will be located.

Bands, singing groups, dancers, clowns and many of the show-business stars will be seen in special performances as they pass NBC-TV's cameras. These performances, staged in front of spectators along Broadway in the grandstand area, will be seen on television exclusively on NBC, which also will present exclusive coverage of the circus and will be the only network to televise the entire parade.

Schenkel is best known as the TV voice of the New York Football Giants. Palmer has described many major golf, basketball and other events covered by NBC-TV, and will be the host and executive producer of a weekly 90-minute "Sports International" color series starting Saturday, Jan. 12.

Ed Pierce will produce NBC-TV's two-hour color coverage of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade and Circus. Directors will be Dick Schneider and Ted Nathanson.

NEHRU, ROMULO AND 4 AMBASSADORS COMMEND 'MEET THE PRESS'

Program to Mark Its 15th TV Anniversary

Four ambassadors, the prime minister of India and the former President of the Philippines have written producer Lawrence E. Spivak letters of commendation on the 15th TV anniversary of his NBC series "Meet the Press."

"Meet the Press" will mark its 15th anniversary Sunday, Nov. 11 with James A. Farley as guest. He had appeared on the first TV "Meet the Press" Nov. 6, 1947. (The program is broadcast, in color, on NBC-TV at 6 p.m. EST, and on NBC Radio at 6:30 p.m. EST.)

India's Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, who appeared on the program last year, wrote, "I remember well the 'Meet the Press' programme in which I was interviewed... I think I enjoyed the programme, and I thought the idea was a good one."

Habib Bourguiba Jr., ambassador to the U. S. from Tunisia, wrote, "Having had the privilege of appearing on the program, I can say that it was one of the best opportunities I ever had to fulfill my mission of good will and information in the United States. The comments I subsequently heard are the best evidence that 'Meet the Press' has achieved the status of a national institution in this country."

The ambassador of China, Tingfu F. Tsiang, wrote, "Of the journalists who interviewed me when I appeared as guest, whether sympathetic or critical -- and both types are always present -- all were informed enough to put pertinent and significant questions.

2 - 'Meet the Press'

Facing them, I knew it would be worse than useless to fall back on ambiguities or generalities or emotional rhetoric. 'Meet the Press' is now an institution of which the American people in general and the journalistic profession in particular can well be proud."

Koichiro Asakai, ambassador of Japan, wrote, "The longevity of this program is not at all surprising, for its contribution to public enlightenment has been considerable."

Herve Alphand, French ambassador to the U. S., wrote, "As a participant, I may add that the selection of the questions and their improvised nature give to a foreign ambassador one of the most difficult tasks he can face. But at the same time this gives him the opportunity of expressing freely... the opinion of his country."

Carlos P. Romulo, former president of the Philippines and now president of the University of the Philippines, wrote: "Because the discussions are unrehearsed, the questions and answers spontaneous, and the subjects timely and substantive, the range of your listeners is unlimited, and here in the Far East it is the favorite program of uncounted thousands in several Asian countries."

HOW NBC NEWS PRESENTED FULL, FAST AND FACTUAL ELECTION RETURNS
More Than Half of Network TV Audience in U.S. Was Tuned to NBC-TV;
NBC 'Dewline' Reporting Scored on Both TV and Radio

Nearly half of all Americans viewing network election coverage Tuesday night watched NBC-TV as it led the way in 10 hours of programming with full, fast and factual reporting of returns, accurate projections of the results, and clear interpretations of what the vote would mean.

The coverage by Chet Huntley, David Brinkley and some 3,700 other correspondents, special reporters, tabulators and technicians attracted an audience nearly as large as the other two networks combined, according to the National Arbitron rating service. The figures showed NBC with a 21.5 rating and a 48 share of the three-network audience, while CBS had a 15.6 rating and a 35 share, and ABC a 7.3 rating and a 17 share.

The NBC News "Dewline" reporting system, which placed reporters in hundreds of precincts in six key states, gave the NBC Television and Radio Networks an early lead in tabulating returns. By 7:40 p.m. EST, NBC was reporting Abraham Ribicoff with 144,875 votes, while CBS gave him only 64,875 and ABC only 72,468. Similarly, at 8:18 p.m. EST, the NBC News "Decision Desk" declared Governor Nelson Rockefeller and Senator Jacob Javits, both Republicans, re-elected in New York. At the same time, CBS was reporting Rockefeller's Democratic opponent Robert Morgenthau, as running ahead by 37,000 votes.

In 14 pivotal states, where NBC News stationed reporters in every county, the network again leaped ahead early in the evening. In the gubernatorial race in Maryland, for example, NBC reported incumbent Democrat J. Millard Tawes with 57,628 votes at 8:40 p.m. EST, when CBS counted only 20,557 and ABC only 23,570. In Ohio, the NBC margin at 7:46 p.m. EST was 6,810 votes for Republican James A. Rhodes, compared to only 181 compiled by CBS for the same candidate.

The RCA computer systems center at Cherry Hill, N.J., meanwhile, was using the early returns to project the final results. As early as 8:15 p.m. EST, RCA computers projected a plurality of 500,000 for Rockefeller. Just 12 hours later, on NBC's "Today" program, the actual tabulations of the vote gave the Governor a plurality of 508,484. Not long after what David Brinkley called their "9:30 feeding," the RCA computers projected the victory of gubernatorial candidate George Romney with 50.5 percent of the returns in Michigan.

From 11:18 p.m. EST, the computers consistently projected re-election for Governor Edmund (Pat) Brown in California, even though the early returns showed Richard Nixon ahead.

At 12:21 a.m. EST, the RCA "Operation Ballot" computers projected the new Senate within one seat of the standings as they were shown hours later. The computers projected a Senate with 67 Democrats and 33 Republicans. At 12:02 a.m. EST, the computers projected the House makeup within two seats of the count indicated much later, a projection of 261 seats for the Democrats and 174 seats for the Republicans.

At 1:17 p.m. EST on NBC-TV and at 1:19 p.m. on NBC Radio today (Wednesday, Nov. 7), NBC News presented a bulletin that former Vice President Richard M. Nixon had conceded victory to Edmund G. (Pat) Brown in the governor's race in California. The announcement was made through Nixon's press chief, Herb Klein.

Analysis and interpretation of the vote were provided by Huntley, Brinkley and other NBC Newsmen. Four regional correspondents -- Sander Vanocur (East), Frank McGee (South), Merrill Mueller (Midwest) and John Chancellor (Far West) -- appeared on the "Today" show Wednesday morning after their all-night stint to discuss the reasons why the Democrats held or bettered their positions around the country -- an unusual feat for the party-in-power in an off-year election. Chancellor offered the view that in 1960 John F. Kennedy, unlike better-known Presidential candidates, had not swept Democrats into office with him and thus the party had "little fat to cut away."

The NBC News vote-gathering system, believed to be the largest communications complex ever assembled for a single news event, included some 8,000 telephones and 70,000 miles of telephone lines. For two key states, not even phones were fast enough to satisfy NBC News. In California and Michigan, the network used direct video circuits which transmitted pictures of vote-tally boards to New York where they were put directly on the network.

The NBC-TV programming, which began Tuesday at 7 p.m. EST, ended Wednesday morning at 5 a.m., then resumed with the "Today" program (7-9 a.m. EST), was produced by Reuven Frank. The NBC Radio programming, which began at 7:05 p.m. EST and ended next morning at 5 a.m. EST, was produced by Russ Tornabene. The coverage was supervised by William R. McAndrew, Executive Vice President, NBC News, and Julian Goodman, Vice President, NBC News. NBC's election chief was Elmer W. Lower, General Manager, NBC News.

The NBC Radio coverage featured Morgan Beatty and Robert McCormick as anchormen in a glassed-in "Radio Deck" overlooking "Election Central" in Studio 8-H in New York. They were assisted by regional correspondents Leon Pearson (East), Bill Fitzgerald (South), Jim Hurlbut (Midwest) and Ed Gough (West) and 20 other correspondents stationed in

TALLY WHOA!

Some Stoppers from NBC News Election Central

From Maine to California the sublime and the ridiculous happened with equal frequency on Election Night. NBC News collected the following gems.

An NBC page refused NBC Newsman Gabe Pressman admittance to Election Central in Studio 8-H because he was not wearing the appropriate badge. Syndicated columnist Art Buchwald walked in without hindrance -- wearing a CBS badge.

Sander Vanocur; NBC News correspondent for the East, received a telegram complaining he was overlooking returns from Maine. The wire was sent from Corpus Christi, Texas.

Of some 60 girls handling returns on the floor of NBC's Election Central, all came to work dressed "to the teeth" -- all hoping they would appear briefly, at least, on camera. That is all but one -- she was dressed in dungarees.

One antique touch in electronic-jammed Election Central was a dumb-waiter. It was used to haul notes, coffee and sandwiches from the studio floor to a deck from which Chet Huntley and David Brinkley broadcast.

At approximately 9:30 p.m. EST, the NBC News staff in New York was served a snack: 800 sandwiches, 72 gallons of coffee and 600 pastries.

KEY NBC NEWS CORRESPONDENTS ON MAJOR ELECTION ASSIGNMENTS
CALL IT A NIGHT--AND A DAY--AFTER APPEARANCE ON 'TODAY'

After 10 continuous hours on-the-air, NBC News four regional correspondents had just enough time to shave, change their shirts and have breakfast before facing the TV cameras again to review the 1962 election results on NBC-TV's "Today" show this morning (Wednesday, Nov. 7).

Sander Vanocur, who covered the East, Frank McGee the South, Merrill Mueller the Midwest, and John Chancellor the Far West, reported on the important races in those parts of the country during NBC News election coverage on NBC-TV from 7 p.m. EST Tuesday, Nov. 6 until 5 a.m. EST today, Wednesday, Nov. 7.

Leaving Election Center shortly after 5 a.m., when NBC News TV coverage ended, the four newsmen gathered their notes and left the studio for their offices three floors below for a quick shave and change of shirts.

They then met for breakfast in a coffee shop next door to the Florida Showcase Exhibit Hall on the main floor of the RCA Building, New York, where "Today" broadcasts from 7-9 a.m. EST each morning.

Shortly after 7:30 a.m. EST, the four correspondents were on the camera again, seated around the same table for the first time since the returns coverage started to review the significance of the election results with "Today" host Hugh Downs.

Finally, at 8 a.m. EST, some 15 hours after reporting to work on Election Night, Vanocur, McGee, Mueller and Chancellor were able to call it a night -- and a day.

NBC News correspondent Martin Agronsky, who also appeared on "Today" this morning (Wednesday, Nov. 7) flew to New York from Boston with just one hour to spare.

Agronsky appeared on "Today" during the weeks preceding Election Day to interview the leading candidates for a special pre-election series of "Today" reports.

He appeared on "Today" this morning to conclude his series of reports. However, he had to fly to New York from the Lodge headquarters in Boston after wrapping-up the story in Boston.

This production of Boris Godunov in John Gutman's English translation uses the Rimsky-Korsakov orchestration. The scene is set in Russia and Poland at the end of the 16th Century. Boris Godunov is chosen tsar after the murder of the Tsareivitch Dimitri. Some years later, during his reign, a monk Grigori leaves his monastery and pretends to be Dimitri. In Poland he enlists aid of Rangoni and Marina, and raises troops to invade Russia. Boris, conscience-stricken over the death of the young prince, is haunted by visions of the dead boy. He finally dies, after advising his son Fyodor to rule wisely. The people in the forest hail the invading Dimitri, and a simpleton sings a prayer for Mother Russia. (The NBC Opera Company presentation reverses the order of the scenes of the Rimsky-Korsakov version to end with the forest scene instead of the death of Boris. This was planned by Moussorgsky and is done in many opera houses.)

'EMERGENCY WARD'

Real-Life Experiences of a Young Doctor in New York's Bellevue
Hospital to Be Presented on "Du Pont Show of the Week";
Dana Andrews Will Narrate Full-Hour Program

The actual experiences of a young doctor confronted with a succession of crises in one of the world's busiest hospitals will be the subject of "Emergency Ward" on NBC-TV's "Du Pont Show of the Week" series Sunday, Nov. 18 (10-11 p.m. EST).

Filmed at Bellevue Hospital in New York City, this dramatic documentary will focus on Dr. Martein Mulder, 26-year-old intern, as he faces critical decisions in treating the ill. To make this unprecedented study of hospital activity, Creative Projects, NBC News, obtained the consent of Bellevue authorities to place cameras in the Emergency Ward and other key areas and to follow Dr. Mulder in his work.

Dana Andrews, star of many motion pictures highly acclaimed by critics and the public over the past 23 years, will narrate "Emergency Ward." He will describe parts of the action but will not appear on-camera. (As previously announced, Andrews will star in "Mutiny," another "Du Pont Show of the Week," in color on NBC-TV Sunday, Dec. 2 -- 10-11 p.m. EST.)

Frank De Felitta, whose TV credits include many award-winning documentaries and who has written screenplays for several feature films, is writer, producer and director of "Emergency Ward." Irving Gitlin is executive producer.

For Dr. Mulder, whose routine is 36 hours on duty and eight hours off, Bellevue's Emergency Ward is his classroom and the patients who come through its doors in a never ending stream are his "textbooks." Dr. Mulder, in his first year of internship, is watched and guided by the first-year resident, Dr. Richard Lewis, who is watched and guided alike by the house resident, Dr. Raymond Turner -- all under supervision of the chief resident, Dr. Peter Mott. Over the entire group is Dr. Charles A. Ragan Jr., director and visiting physician of Columbia University's First Medical Division.

These physicians, along with nurses, patients and medical students at Bellevue, are the figures in a real-life drama which is sometimes tragic, often inspiring, occasionally humorous.

"Emergency Ward" shows Dr. Mulder's first unsuccessful case -- a middle-aged man, brought in unconscious with a brain injury, who dies despite valiant efforts to save him.

It shows another patient who rejects Dr. Mulder's advice to undergo surgery which can save his life, because the operation may leave him disabled.

The program records a typical night in the busy ward in which Dr. Mulder works at his utmost capacity. In lighter segments, it shows the young physician during morning ward rounds and afternoon out-patient clinic.

As a dramatic climax, "Emergency Ward" pictures the team effort to save a man with an acute heart attack -- a crucial 15-minute life and death battle.

'THE THREAD OF LIFE,' STORY OF HUMAN HEREDITY,

TO HAVE REPEAT COLOR BROADCAST DEC. 16

ON THE 'BELL SYSTEM SCIENCE SERIES'

A story of human heredity, "The Thread of Life," will be repeated on the "Bell System Science Series" Sunday, Dec. 16 (NBC-TV color broadcast, 5-6 p.m. EST). Dr. Frank Baxter is guide in all broadcasts of this science series. Live action, scientific documentary film, animated diagrams, charts and models are used to tell about the complicated processes of human heredity.

The program traces the development of the science of genetics in relation to plants, to animals and finally to human beings. It was prepared by a committee of scientists and was produced for this series by Warner Brothers, with Owen Crump as producer and director.

"The Thread of Life" shows how human life begins with a cell no larger than the dot made on paper by the point of a sharp pencil. Within that cell when it has been fertilized are 23 pairs of chromosomes, and on each chromosome are hundreds of genes, like beads on a string. As the original cell divides and subdivides into the trillions of cells that make up a human body, the genes and chromosomes divide, too, so that the same genes and chromosomes go into each new cell and govern its development.

A highlight of the program is the showing of part of a model of a DNA molecule (deoxyribonucleic acid), which many scientists now believe may hold the deepest secrets of the mechanisms of heredity. DNA molecules are so small that they can be seen only through an electron microscope.

SECOND 'BOB HOPE SHOW' OF SEASON WILL HAVE JACK BENNY, ETHEL MERMAN
AND BOBBY DARIN AS GUESTS ON NBC-TV NETWORK THURSDAY, NOV. 29
Hour Special is Sponsored by U.S. Time Corp. and Kitchens of Sara Lee

Jack Benny, Ethel Merman and Bobby Darin will join Bob Hope when he presents a full-hour comedy-with-music revue on "The Bob Hope Show" Thursday, Nov. 29 (NBC-TV 8:30-9:30 p.m. EST).

This broadcast, second of six Bob Hope specials scheduled for the 1962-63 season, will be sponsored by the United States Time Corporation (Timex) and the Kitchens of Sara Lee.

Hope will open the program with an "International" edition of his usually timely monologue, taped in England where he is currently working on the motion picture "Call Me Bwana."

In the first of two sketches, "Bird Brain of Alcatraz," Benny is cast in the role of the "Bird Brain" with Hope portraying his cellmate who is slowly being driven mad by the sound of hundreds of chirping birds.

Bobby Darin will sing his own version of "All of Me," and then team with Hope in a medley of "the top ten songs on the global hit parade."

The second sketch, "The Unsinkable Ethel," finds Miss Merman as a riverboat gambling queen, Darin as her cheating dealer and "Goober" Hope as their gullible victim.

Miss Merman returns to sing two numbers she introduced in Broadway shows, "This Is It" from "Stars in Your Eyes" and "Do I Love You?" from "DuBarry Was a Lady."

A "serious" Jack Benny returns intending to play the violin, hoping that his host will insist, enduring numerous insults and finally yielding to the impulse by performing his famous rendition of "The Bee."

"The Bob Hope Show," produced by George Hope and directed by Jack Shea, was pre-taped (except for the London monologue) before an audience at NBC studios in Burbank, Calif. It will pre-empt "Dr. Kildare" on this date.

THE STORY

An atmosphere of mystery and terror clouds the USS Bowers, a Navy brig-of-war, when in 1842 it returns to the Brooklyn Navy Yard from a training cruise with 100 teen-aged, apprentice sailors aboard. One of the cadets, 17-year-old Philip Cantrell (Robert Walker), was killed during the voyage, and there is reason for a Naval Court of Inquiry to summon the ship's captain, Commander Jason Vanning (Dana Andrews), to a hearing on charges of murder. During the tense courtroom examination, the startling, true story of what happened at sea is revealed and, as the camera swings back in time, a terrifying conflict between Vanning and Cantrell is played out.

'THE DEATH OF STALIN' AND 'THE RISE OF KHRUSHCHEV'
TWO 'NBC WHITE PAPER' SPECIALS, WILL BE PRESENTED
ON NBC-TV A WEEK APART--ON JAN. 27 AND FEB. 3

Two programs in the award-winning "NBC White Paper" series, covering a most important period in recent Soviet history -- the critical years from 1952 to 1958 -- will be presented on the NBC-TV Network a week apart early in 1963.

The special programs are "The Death of Stalin," which will be broadcast Sunday, Jan. 27 (10-11 p.m. EST) and "The Rise of Khrushchev," which will be presented Sunday, Feb. 3 (10-11 p.m. EST). They were scheduled in close proximity to maintain continuity in depicting the events in this key period.

These "White Papers" will be presentations of Creative Projects, NBC News, under the supervision of executive producer Irving Gitlin. They will be produced by Fred Freed, who last season produced two other programs in this series which examined aspects of the Communist world -- "Khrushchev and Berlin" and "Red China."

The examination of internal affairs in the Soviet Union will be documented with first-hand reports from many prominent persons, including high-ranking Communist leaders, government officials of Western powers, and journalists from many countries, who were eyewitnesses to developments on the Russian scene. The programs will show films obtained from East Germany and Yugoslavia, and from private collections throughout the world.

Many of the eyewitness reports were never before presented in a broadcast and much of the film footage has not been seen in the United States, Mr. Gitlin said.----- NBC-New York, 11/12/62

Durante, star of the soon-to-be-released film, "Jumbo," will ride a "Jumbo" float.

Among those aboard a sports float will be Terry, the New York Yankees' pitcher voted the outstanding performer in the 1962 World Series; Mays, the great slugger of the San Francisco Giants; and Dempsey, former world heavyweight boxing champion.

Krupa, with his drums and combo, will ride a jazz float. Miss Lawrence is starring in the Broadway hit, "Night Life."

'THE RIVER NILE,' 1-HOUR NBC NEWS COLOR DOCUMENTARY, AVAILABLE TO SCHOOL FILM LIBRARIES THROUGH NBC MERCHANDISING

NBC Merchandising has arranged for "The River Nile" to be made available to the permanent film libraries of schools across the country. The full-hour color documentary, produced by Lou Hazam and NBC News, was recently seen on the NBC-TV Network.

Norman Lunenfeld, Manager, NBC Merchandising, points out that "The River Nile," which won unanimous acclaim from the critics, has prompted schools to break precedent.

"Usually, film librarians at educational institutions are interested in 15 to 30-minute documentaries," Mr. Lunenfeld said.

"However, in the case of "The River Nile," they are willing to purchase the fuller length regardless of the difficulties involved in scheduling it in a school's curriculum, and regardless of the extra cost."

National distribution of "The River Nile" to schools will be handled by Film Associates of California.

ROBERT Q. LEWIS TO BE PERMANENT HOST OF 'PLAY YOUR HUNCH'

Robert Q. Lewis, who was one of the interim emcees of NBC-TV's Monday-through-Friday "Play Your Hunch" color series, will be the permanent host of the show starting Monday, Nov. 19 (10:30-11 a.m. EST).

Lewis was the "Play Your Hunch" host during the first two weeks of October after Merv Griffin left the series to star in the new NBC-TV daytime color program, "The Merv Griffin Show."

For many years a familiar personality on both radio and television shows originating in New York, Lewis moved to the West Coast during the Summer of 1961. He has since had a daily four-hour disc-jockey show on a Hollywood radio station, and returned to New York only for guest appearances and for the two-week stint in October as "Play Your Hunch" host.

His entertainment career also includes nightclub and Summer stock performances. He is a native of New York City.

LAWMAKERS WHO 'MET THE PRESS'
HAVE PRAISE FOR NBC SERIES

On Oct. 16, 1960, Senator John F. Kennedy, campaigning for the Presidency in Silver Springs, Md., said in a speech: "We have been to New Jersey today and Delaware -- and to 'The 51st State,' as I call 'Meet the Press'!..."

As "Meet the Press" marked its 15th anniversary on the NBC-TV Network last Sunday (Nov. 11) leaders of Congress, too, praised the program, currently the oldest network program on television. (It is now presented each Sunday at 6 p.m. on NBC-TV in color, and at 6:30 p.m. on NBC Radio).

Among letters sent to Lawrence E. Spivak, producer of the program, was one from Speaker of the House, John W. McCormack (D.-Mass.) who wrote: "'Meet the Press'...is a marked contribution towards enlightening the American people and in arousing and establishing an informed public opinion."

Other Congressmen who wrote were:

House Minority Leader Charles A. Halleck (R.-Ind.): "It is always a challenge for me to appear on 'Meet the Press' because I know from past experience the nation-wide scope and high caliber of your audience."

Representative William E. Miller (R.-N.Y.), Republican National Chairman: "I personally find it (the program) very educational and stimulating and would recommend it to viewers of all ages as a means of keeping abreast of the times."

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D.-Minn.): "Your amazingly objective and precise questioning always seems to sting your 'victims' into a newsworthy and enlightening response. You have performed an immensely valuable service to better public understanding of our government and its policies."

Representative Emanuel Celler (D.-N.Y.): "Meet the Press" is deservedly a popular program with a large, regular audience..."

Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D.-N.Y.): "As one who has appeared on 'Meet the Press,' I feel that no program in any of the media of public opinion has more of an impact on the thinking of American citizens than does 'Meet the Press.'"

Senator Jacob K. Javits (R.-N.Y.): "'Meet the Press' is as newsworthy as the morning paper and I hope it will be with us for many more years to come..."

Senator A. S. Mike Monroney (D.-Okla.): "'Meet the Press' is a temptation almost impossible for a Senator to resist, then a horror to contemplate, and finally such a fast-moving, provocative discussion on the air that it is almost always worthwhile for guest, panelists and viewers."

Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R.-Mass.): "It is a program that not only gives real information, but it affords an opportunity for the people to judge the sincerity of the questions and answers."

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R.-Mass.): "...I believe that more distinguished people not only from the United States, but from all over the world have appeared on it ('Meet the Press') than on any other news program."

Representative James Roosevelt (D.-Calif.): "I think 'Meet the Press' has illustrated many times that one may get second-hand reports but, as the old saying goes, if you really want the facts -- get it "from the horse's mouth! (And, of course, this in no way implies that the participants are horses.)"

Representative Chet Holifield (D.-Calif.): "...Your 15th anniversary on television is ample proof of the value of your program in presenting to the American people, through penetrating questions, every facet of the most current issues of our times."

Representative Melvin R. Laird (R.-Wis): "...'Meet the Press' has lived up to the finest traditions of responsible programming."

Representative Oren Harris (D.-Ark.): "...one of the most outstanding public service features of our communications media during this generation."

Representative Clarence J. Brown (R.-Ohio): "It is hard to believe 15 years have passed by since you first started this program which has proven so newsworthy on a national basis throughout the years..."

To the above was a message from Connecticut's Senator-Elect Abraham Ribicoff (D.-Conn): "Whenever I have appeared on the program, there has been heavy mail response and the personal comments indicate the viewers to be aware."

PRESIDENT KENNEDY AND WEST GERMAN CHANCELLOR ADENAUER
PRAISE 'MEET THE PRESS' ON ITS 15TH TV ANNIVERSARY

President John F. Kennedy and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer have written Lawrence E. Spivak, producer of "Meet the Press," on the occasion of the program's 15th anniversary on NBC-TV, observed on the broadcast of Sunday, Nov. 11.

The text of President Kennedy's letter follows:

"Congratulations to you and 'Meet the Press' on its Fifteenth Anniversary.

"The unusual durability of your show on network television is eloquent testimony to its consistently high quality and significance. Having appeared as a Congressman, Senatorial candidate, Senator, Presidential aspirant and Presidential nominee, I know from personal experience how widely your program is viewed and respected.

"Keep up the good work.

"With every good wish,

Sincerely,

John F. Kennedy."

Chancellor Adenauer wrote:

"The press, radio and television carry an especially great responsibility for the maintenance and proper understanding of the right to freedom. For one-and-a-half decades, 'Meet the Press' has offered the leading political figures of all nations a forum from which they can voice their opinions and represent their viewpoints. Several times I myself have been pleased to take advantage of this opportunity.

"'Meet the Press' shall have to carry into the future its contribution toward the preservation of freedom in the world. To this end I send my best wishes for continued success to the program and its staff."

Other comments from notables in letters to Mr. Spivak follow:

General Lauris Norstad, Supreme Commander, Allied Powers,

Europe: "Never in our history has there been a greater need for public discussion of the issues which face our country. By bringing into the American home men and women who are familiar with the problems and issues of the day, your outstanding program is making an invaluable contribution in the field of public service."

Christian A. Herter, former Secretary of State: "It is extraordinary to me that it ('Meet the Press') has retained its original format and style from the very beginning, and it has succeeded in bringing the human qualities of many important people to the attention of the American people."

Dr. Edward Teller, one of the world's pioneers in nuclear physics, also congratulated "Meet the Press" in a letter to Mr. Spivak, which, in part, said: "I hope that you will carry on for many years to come."

("Meet the Press" is presented Sundays on the NBC-TV Network -- in color -- at 6 p.m. EST, and on the NBC Radio Network at 6:30 p.m. EST).

'GARY COOPER--TALL AMERICAN': A TV PORTRAIT

Full-Hour 'Project 20' Program on NBC-TV Will Present

'Warm and Affectionate' Story of Star as His

Closest Friends and Family Knew Him

Gary Cooper, still fresh in the affections of tens of millions, will be the subject of a full-hour "Project 20" program on the NBC-TV Network this season, Donald B. Hyatt, producer-director of "Project 20," announced today.

The television portrait titled "Gary Cooper--Tall American," will be broadcast Tuesday, March 26, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. EST, under sponsorship of the Savings and Loan Foundation. Hyatt will produce and direct the program, and Robert Garthwaite will be associate producer. Richard Hanser will write the script and Robert Russell Bennett will compose the orchestral score.

Cooper will be portrayed as representing "something peculiarly American," according to Hyatt. "His screen personality symbolized the true spirit of the American for millions here and abroad. Our aim is to show not just the world-renowned actor, a Hollywood phenomenon, but a man who was a kind of international archetype of the American character at its best."

The new production springs from the "Project 20" unit's "deep personal involvement" with Gary Cooper, Hyatt said. "The last thing he did was for us -- 'The Real West.' It was a labor of love for him and a fitting last testament, reflecting as it did a life-long interest in the history of the American frontier that stemmed from his own early days in Montana. He himself was delighted with it, and felt that if it had to be one last thing he would do, this was it."

It was Cooper's first and only major television appearance, and it turned out to be his last performance before the cameras. The program and his part in it were unanimously hailed by the press and the public at its premiere March 29, 1961, and it went on to win international awards.

"The unit was so taken by him, inspired by the association with him during his last months, that we have been enthusiastic about trying to portray some of the qualities of the man that so impressed us," Hyatt said.

"No one of us who worked with him during that last year will ever forget the experience. During the year we worked together, he knew of his illness, but his spirit never changed and he gave no hint of what he knew was happening to him. When he finished his work on the program in March, 1961, he went to bed, and seven weeks later he was gone."

The new program will afford a "warm and affectionate" insight into the man behind the on-screen image, according to Hyatt, showing him as he was known to his closest friends and family, the off-screen personality who was called "Coop" by those nearest to him.

Many persons who were close to Cooper will talk about him on-camera. His friends ranged from film stars to the grips on the set, from royalty to Caribbean skin-divers, from the horsemen who rode the range with him to Pablo Picasso and the brightest names in international society. A representative selection will take part in the program.

Mrs. Cooper is making available to "Project 20" a considerable store of home movies she took of her husband, Hyatt said, and Cooper's friends are giving "whole-hearted support" in the effort to do a definitive portrait.

Film will be newly made in many of the places Cooper lived, including the Montana ranch where he spent his early years, and in many of the places throughout the world where work and adventure took him.

Archive news film will show Cooper skiing with his wife and daughter at Aspen, Colo.; Cooper at the wedding of his friend James Stewart, Cooper entertaining the troops in New Guinea during the Second World War, Cooper with Queen Elizabeth, Cooper testifying as a friend of the court before the House Un-American Activities Committee in Washington, Cooper doing a comedy circus act with Buster Keaton. Stills depicting his early years also will be used.

Characteristic sequences from those of his popular motion pictures which best depict the Gary Cooper screen personality will be shown. His major roles constituted virtually a complete gallery of the personalities Americans have most admired and loved: pioneer, cowboy, citizen-soldier, pilot, bashful lover, self-confident adventurer, and homespun idealist challenging a wicked world.

Cooper was born May 7, 1901, in Helena, Montana. He died at his home in Los Angeles May 13, 1961. Newspapers all around the world put the story of his death on the front page, and millions of all nationalities read it with a deep sense of personal loss. For 30 years he had been one of the great box-office stars of all time.

"Ours will not be just another Hollywood story, a collection of cuts from famous films, or a mere then-he-starred-in marathon," Hyatt said. "Gary Cooper the man will be of equal importance with the public personality. We hope to show graphically that he represented to the world something peculiarly American."

McCann-Erickson is the agency for the Savings and Loan Foundation, which also sponsored "The Real West." A program title and a narrator will be announced soon.

BEING CASTRO GOVERNMENT PRISONER FOR MOST OF TWO WEEKS IN HAVANA
DID NOT DETER NBC'S ROBERT MacNEIL FROM APPRAISING TODAY'S CUBA

You can learn a lot about Cuba today from two weeks in Havana -- even if you spend most of the time as a prisoner of Fidel Castro's Red government.

This was proved by the observations of Robert MacNeil, NBC News correspondent, who was released last week. MacNeil was the only staff news correspondent of any U. S. news organization to enter Cuba since the crisis developed.

He was placed under house arrest after arriving from Mexico City. MacNeil and other newsmen were kept in the onetime luxury hotel, the Capri. Now, MacNeil reports, the former gambling house at the Capri is just an elaborate bar, with only the square lights which once hung over the roulette tables, testifying to its past.

The newsmen were allowed the use of only one floor and were strictly supervised by armed guards.

The Cubans showed no discrimination in their treatment of newsmen, however, MacNeil said. Reporters from outside the United States were also restricted and even some East German correspondents were not allowed outside Havana, he added.

After eight days at the Capri, MacNeil and the other newsmen were released and told they could work. But four days later they were arrested again and confined to a Havana jail. MacNeil conceded the Havana jail "was not the cleanest place in the world," but that it was "not a hellhole."

His last two days in Havana were spent at the Capri where the reporters were allowed the run of the building. The floor show there was excellent, MacNeil said -- "better than some I have seen in Paris. The girls were beautiful; the costumes and sets were excellent."

During his period of freedom, MacNeil met several Cubans who were willing to talk against the Castro regime, in private at least. They explained that every neighborhood has a committee for the defense of the revolution -- informers who report regularly to the state police. If anyone escapes from jail, MacNeil said, he has a difficult time finding anyone to hide him -- the committees and certain shopkeepers tell the police of any strangers in the neighborhood.

It is impossible to buy milk in the city of Havana although Castro insists that every Cuban gets a liter of milk each day, MacNeil said. Food shortages are apparent everywhere in Cuba, he added. The sugar crop in 1962 was 4.8 metric tons, compared with 7.01 metric tons in the peak year of 1946, 6.7 metric tons in 1951.

MacNeil learned that the sugar crop failure is due to a number of factors: Shortage of labor, bad weather, some sabotage and incompetent cane cutting by amateur cutters.

Another source of administrative trouble in Cuba, MacNeil speculated, could be the youth and lack of education of high-ranking officials. Many of them are between 20 and 25 years old; most have not had a college education, MacNeil noted.

Cuban bureaucrats, although committed to the principles of Communism, are not averse to good living, MacNeil observed. When he dined at the El Toro Restaurant, a lavish show-place high above Havana, several officers of the revolution, complete with pistols, khakis and beards, trooped in to treat themselves to the $10-and-up dinners.

Since his release Nov. 16, and his return to the U. S. via Mexico City, MacNeil has related some of his experiences and judgments on Cuba on such NBC News programs as "Today," "Monitor" and "This Is NBC News," within a period of three days.

NBC NEWS CAMERAMAN GRANT WOLFKILL, FORMER PRISONER OF LAOS REDS, IS ASSIGNED TO CHINA-INDIA AREA TO COVER BORDER WARFARE

NBC News cameraman Grant Wolfkill, who was a prisoner of Communist forces in Laos for 15 months, has been assigned to the China-India area where he will cover the border warfare.

Wolfkill has been recuperating from his imprisonment since last August, when he was released, and has been in Shelton, Wash., at the home of his parents since.

WINDBREAKERS--NOT TRENCHCOATS--ARE THE GARB OF CUBAN SECURITY AGENTS,
NBC NEWS' ROBERT MacNEIL REPORTS ON "TODAY" AFTER HAVANA DETENTION

Windbreakers and not trenchcoats seem to be the uniform of Cuban security agents, according to NBC News Correspondent Robert MacNeil.

MacNeil, who appeared on NBC-TV's "Today" show yesterday morning (Monday, Nov. 19) arrived in this country Friday night (Nov. 16) after spending two weeks in Havana, mostly as a prisoner.

He was free just four days while in Havana, and then was under surveillance and followed all the time.

"They have young guys in windbreakers who sort of lounge around everywhere and follow you," said MacNeil.

During his period of freedom, MacNeil noticed that Cubans brightened perceptibly when they learned he was not Russian.

"They don't like the Russians," said MacNeil. "It's probably chiefly due to the fact that they identify the Russians partly with their present situation, the shortage of some things and the certainly inferior types of consumer goods that they're getting now because they're totally dependent upon the Communist countries."

The city people especially, who like a good time and nice things, feel strongly when these things are taken away. As an example, MacNeil said, women cannot buy lipstick or stockings and the soap is very inferior.

"All of these very ordinary things of life are absent," said MacNeil, "and I think they identify the Russians with that."

Discussing the American quarantine of Cuba, MacNeil said he encountered no popular hostility to it, adding:

"Although the regime has been plugging this very strong, the Cubans so far have not been very susceptible to the propaganda, except the people who are convinced supporters of Castro.

"But, on the contrary, the blockade has worked somewhat to their advantage because a lot of the nicer Cuban foodstuffs that were being shipped out to the Communist countries have not been going out. And so recently, they have been able to get orange juice and even lobsters."

CALIFORNIA--DUE TO BE MOST POPULOUS STATE BY END OF 1962--
WILL BE SUBJECT OF NBC NEWS FULL-HOUR COLOR SPECIAL
SPONSORED BY LINCOLN-MERCURY DIV. OF FORD MOTOR CO.

California, which before the end of 1962 will pass New York to become America's most populous state, will be the subject of a full-hour NBC News special to be broadcast in color on the NBC-TV Network Thursday, Feb. 21, 1963 (7:30-8:30 p.m. EST).

Lincoln-Mercury Division of Ford Motor Company, through Kenyon & Eckhardt Inc., will sponsor the program.

NBC News correspondent Edwin Newman will narrate the special, which is being produced by Gerald Green. Fred Rheinstein is associate producer and director, and the cameraman is Dexter Alley.

"It is estimated that more than 1,000 new people cross the border into California every 24 hours," said Newman. "Census Department computers indicate that sometime before Christmas California's population will pass New York's 17.3 million mark. This special program will show what it is that draws people to California and what are some of the opportunities as well as the difficulties that these newcomers will find there. We will also examine some of the problems that have resulted from the state's unbridled growth and how they are being solved."

The program will open at a border agricultural checking station in Southern California where, late last Summer, a cross-section of new arrivals gave reasons for coming to California.

Other scenes will include:

Newman driving over a freeway built to speed travelers across sprawling cities but which sometimes traps them in a paralyzing traffic jam.

A visit to a large San Diego defense plant, a typical industry in a state which is a center of the nation's space and defense effort, to see what happens to some employees when there is a cutback in aircraft and missile production.

The University of California's Berkeley campus where three Nobel Prize winners will be seen teaching advanced science classes in the same vast educational system that also grants degrees in cosmetology.

Two water supply projects, the Feather River Valley project and a de-salination plant in San Diego, which are examples of California's efforts to meet enormous water demands from a swelling population.

Bulldozers carving up desert land for a new suburban community (complete with artificial lake) to house thousands of new Californians.

A meeting of an "Okie Club" whose members are former "Okies" and who are now prosperous and substantial citizens of California.

A "mushroomburger" restaurant for members of one of Los Angeles' many cults.

A visit to the world-famous Forest Lawn Cemetery.

PERRY COMO AND HIS 'MUSIC HALL' TROUPE WILL FLY TO GUANTANAMO
TO ENTERTAIN U.S. MILITARY PERSONNEL
Answer Defense Secretary McNamara's Request to USO

Perry Como and his Music Hall show staff will fly from New York to Guantanamo Naval Base, Cuba, Dec. 4, to entertain the Navy and Marine personnel of the U. S. installation, in answer to a request from Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to the USO. This will be the first entertainment unit to visit Guantanamo since the start of the Cuban crisis.

During their stay (Dec. 4-7) at the Base, the troupe also will tape "Perry Como's Kraft Music Hall" program for broadcast on NBC-TV Wednesday, Dec. 12 (9-10 p.m. EST), with the GIs as the "studio audience." (NOTE: This program will be broadcast in black-and-white only.)

Como's troupe will include guest star Dorothy Collins, Mitchell Ayres and his orchestra, Ray Charles and his singers, the Peter Gennaro dancers, announcer Frank Gallop, producer Nick Vanoff, scenic designer Gary Smith and other members of Como's staff.

Director Dwight Hemion and a technical crew will fly to Cuba this weekend in a cargo plane with cameras, props and other TV equipment.

The USO in New York invited the Como troupe after receiving the following message from the adjutant general:

"In view of the extended period of tension at Guantanamo Naval Base, Cuba, during which personnel have been more or less isolated from outside contacts, the Secretary of Defense has requested that we look into the possibility of flying a celebrity entertainment unit to Guantanamo at an early date---."

The trip will mark a rare out-of-New York origination for Como's NBC-TV show. Since he started his full-hour programs in September, 1955, he has originated only three other shows away from home. They were on Dec. 15, 1956 from the Americana Hotel, Miami Beach, Fla.; April 27, 1960 from London, England, and May 24, 1961 from Chicago, Ill.

As previously announced, Jim Backus stars as the voice of Magoo, who for the first time in his 10-year cartoon life will portray another character -- Ebenezer Scrooge, the man who hates Christmas ("Bah! Humbug!") in Charles Dickens' classic. It will be Magoo's first serious dramatic role, too.

Also previously announced in featured voice roles are Jack Cassidy as Bob Cratchit, Jane Kean as Belle Fezziwig, Royal Dano as Marley's ghost and Joan Gardner as Tiny Tim.

QUICK (AND QUACK) THEME-MUSIC COMMENT FROM PROF. VON DRAKE

Professor Ludwig von Drake -- the noted host, lecturer and actor-star of NBC-TV's color series, "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color" (Sundays, 7:30-8:30 p.m. EST) -- has his pin feathers up over a theme-music roster in the NBC Daily News report Nov. 2.

Von Drake takes quick (and quack) exception to a listing therein stating that the program has no theme music of its own. Donald Duck's erudite uncle writes: "You guys don't put nothin' past von Drake. We have a ducky theme, written by the Sherman brothers, Richard M. and Robert B., which just so happens to be also called 'The Wonderful World of Color.'"

The editors are happy to oblige Professor von Drake herewith by quoting the lyrics to the Walt Disney TV theme song: "Color, color, color / The World is a carousel of color / Wonderful, wonderful color / The blue rolling sea / The red Summer rose / The gold morning sun in the sky / The glorious vision of a rainbow / The bright Autumn leaves on the ground / There's beauty untold / That's ours to behold / In the wonderful world of color."

NBC-TV RESCHEDULES 'THE TUNNEL' BROADCAST FOR DEC. 10

Special NBC News Documentary on Building of Escape Route Under Berlin Wall Will Be Sponsored by Gulf Oil Corporation

FOR RELEASE MONDAY A.M., DEC. 3

"The Tunnel," a special 90-minute NBC News documentary on the building of an escape route under the Berlin Wall which resulted in the rescue of 59 refugees from East Germany, will be presented on the NBC Television Network Monday, Dec. 10, 8:30 to 10 p.m. EST. The program will be sponsored by the Gulf Oil Corporation.

Originally scheduled for Oct. 31, the program was postponed within 24 hours after the outbreak of the crisis over the installation of Soviet missile bases in Cuba. NBC undertook the postponement on its own initiative to avoid the remotest possibility that the program could be used as a pretext to aggravate the unusual tension produced by the Cuban crisis.

Again on the basis of its own judgment, NBC believes the time is appropriate to reschedule the program, which offers not only a vivid insight into one of the world's continuing major problems but an extraordinary testament to human courage and the will to be free.

The digging of the 450-foot tunnel was about a month and 60 feet along when NBC News learned of its existence early last Summer and made arrangements for filming. In producing "The Tunnel," NBC News undertook the most stringent precautionary measures -- first, to avoid adding to the risk of the project while it was under way and later, in editing the film, to remove or mask any footage showing identifiable diggers or refugees without their consent, and to avoid any risk to the general security of such escape operations.

The safeguards taken during the filming were supervised and approved by the student leaders themselves, who had the most direct possible personal stake in the tunnel's security. The complete effectiveness of these precautions was demonstrated by the safe completion of the project -- the most successful of dozens of tunneling attempts under the Berlin Wall.

After first-hand briefings from NBC on the extent of these safeguards during and after the filming, the West Berlin Senate issued a statement on Oct. 20 acknowledging NBC's assurances and adding:

"In its attitude, the Senate respects that NBC is guided by the wish to bring by an authentic report to the public of the United States a direct impression, which is in the interest of Berlin. The decision to show this documentary naturally lies with NBC alone."

Three days later, support for NBC's plans to broadcast the film came from Ernst Lemmer, West Germany's Federal Minister for All-German Affairs, whose post in the Adenauer Cabinet deals with relations between East and West Germany. A statement issued by his Ministry's office in Berlin described NBC's assurances on the security aspects of the film, and added:

"Minister Lemmer stressed that he had not given any comment on the disputed showing. However, he could only welcome it if the events in Berlin were reported to the world public as extensively and precisely as possible."

The film footage within the tunnel -- 6,000 feet, or some three hours of unedited running time -- was shot over a period of almost three months by NBC News Cameraman Peter Dehmel, a 26-year-old West German, who volunteered for the assignment. His brother Klaus served as lightman and assistant cameraman. The coverage was supervised by Reuven Frank, NBC News, assisted by Piers Anderton, NBC News correspondent in West Berlin, who narrates the film, and Gary Stindt, NBC News Film, Central Europe.

("The Tunnel" broadcast will pre-empt "Saints and Sinners" and "The Price Is Right.")

LEADERS OF INDUSTRY AND LABOR PRAISE 'MEET THE PRESS' SERIES
IN ANNIVERSARY MESSAGES TO PRODUCER LAWRENCE E. SPIVAK

Leaders of industry and labor have written Lawrence E. Spivak, producer of "Meet the Press," on the occasion of the program's 15th anniversary on the NBC-TV Network.

Now Board Chairman of Coca Cola Export Corporation, Mr. Farley wrote: "...That you have conducted the program on an exceedingly high plane is evidenced by the position it commands in your field of activity."

Comments from others who have appeared on the program follows:
John L. Lewis, President Emeritus, United Mine Workers of America: "I recall, with pleasure, my own appearances on this program and I am one of its habitual listeners when circumstances permit. Its contribution to the public interest makes it a valued asset to all public-minded citizens."

the feeling that the questions posed by you and other panel members are ones we viewers would like to ask the participants. This is one of the appealing aspects of the program."

George Meany, President, AFL-CIO: "It is not really a surprise to me that 'Meet the Press' is now the oldest network TV program. I can testify that just a half-hour of it can age a man 10 years... I personally enjoy 'Meet the Press' very much -- but, in candor, I must add: when I am a viewer more than when I am a guest."

Michael J. Quill, International President, Transport Workers Union of America: "I was one of your victims more than once and looking back at it now, I must say I thoroughly enjoyed the honest and straightforward approach of you and your associates."

Louis E. Wolfson, Chairman of the Board, Merritt-Chapman & Scott Corporation: "In its unrehearsed give and take, 'Meet the Press' provides an uncensored, unedited exchange of views that offers one of the most effective testimonials today to our democratic principles of free expression."

Joseph Curran, President, National Maritime Union of America: "I thought your show was a great idea when it started and I think you've made the most of it. It's still a great idea. A tough show for your guests but -- with few exceptions -- great for the audience."

T. F. Patton, President, Republic Steel Corporation: "When I turn on my television set to 'Meet the Press' I know I am going to see a forthright program on a subject of importance and interest...Yours is a rare program which fills an important news need in this country..."

William White, Chairman, The Delaware and Hudson Railroad Corporation: "Television programs come and go but we hope that 'Meet the Press,' like the little brook, will run on and on forever."

Eric Johnston, President, Motion Picture Association: "Almost every major world issue, just about every leading world figure -- that's the territory this pioneer has explored in the last decade and a half. And most Americans are better citizens because of it."

Simon Ramo, Vice Chairman of the Board, Thompson Ramo Woolridge, Inc.: "I believe that 'Meet the Press'...represents the best investment of a half-hour weekly by a thinking citizen seeking accurate information about and an over-all appreciation of the people and the factors that are determining the trends of our society."

Arthur B. Langlie, Chairman of the Board, McCall Corporation: "'Meet the Press' does much to illuminate the thinking of Americans on current topics of importance."

Philip D. Reed, former Chairman of the Board, General Electric: "The fact is that 'Meet the Press' is just about the perfect combination of adult education and sparkling entertainment."

Frank Pace Jr., former Chief Executive Officer of General Dynamics: "... 'Meet the Press' fulfills a unique function in American life. Because of the tremendous changes that are taking place, the direct question and answer approach to world and national figures on topics of compelling importance serves a valuable purpose in the education of the American citizen."
